Center Offers Adult Clay Classes

(Manzanita) ... Nehalem artist Brian Johnstone will offer two adult class classes at his Nehalem Clay Works Studio in late June and mid-July, under the auspices of the Hoffman Center.

“Begin Again” will be held Saturday, June 28 from 1 to 4 p.m. The class is for those who haven’t touched clay since high school ceramics classes. Johnstone will demonstrate coil and slab building with guided practice afterward.

“Advanced Techniques” will be held Saturday, July 12 from 1 to 4 p.m. It will continue the slab and coil instruction, with basics of wheelwork added.

Each class will cost $50. The instructional emphasis will be hands-on, so participants are encouraged to wear appropriate clothing. Nehalem Clay Works is located at 37790 North Fork Road, Nehalem.

Johnstone holds a B.A. in Fine Arts from Edinburgh, Scotland, and a D.A. in Fine Arts from the Edinburgh College of Art. He has taught ceramics classes from Indonesia to Mexico, Scotland and Manzanita. His ceramics and paintings have been shown all over the world.

Persons interested in attending either class are asked to contact Glenna Gray at 503-368-3739 or glenna@nehalem.tel.net.
